Dutch Antonisse is Executive Vice President of The Expo Group, a general service contractor offering a Single Source Solution® for exhibitors and show managers that provides one point of contact for all services required for a show.

Dutch has 40 years of industry experience. He started his career in 1963 with Freeman Decorating and became one of the first account executives in the newly created Freeman design and display company. Dutch formed his own custom exhibit, installation and dismantle company and later sold it to Heritage Communications. Dutch then served as president of the publicly traded company for 10 years.

Dutch has been with The Expo Group since the Spring of 1997, touching all departments of the privately owned firm. Under his guidance specifically, the graphics, production and exhibit design divisions of the company have been transformed into state-of-the-art creative services providers.

The Expo Group’s mission to be the premier service company in the tradeshow industry led to the creation of Single Source®, a business process and method now protected by U.S. Patent 6,557,007 B1. The Expo Group continually sets new standards in the tradeshow industry, including speedy checkout, the use of Voice over IP technology, Gold Card service and The Expo Group Show Manager of the Year Awards® honoring the outstanding show managers in the industry.

The Expo Group has headquarters in Dallas and offices in Washington D.C., Las Vegas and San Jose. The Expo Group is an Inc. 500 Fastest Growing Company and a Dallas 100 honoree. EXPO Magazine readers declared The Expo Group Supplier of the Year in 2003.
